Her large scale painting installations are characterized by a monochromatic nature and Revolves around space in all its forms and multiple meanings. Her works emphasize the extreme duality of an epic approach and a microscopic attention to details that are drawn by 'mapping' and scratching the surface.

Her practice includes a manner that can be categorized as action painting, in which she performs physical actions on the surface of the painting. Through smearing, rubbing, peeling, staining and gluing, she harden the fabric, while emphasizing its folds and textures. In Turjeman's work, the canvas may function as a wall, a territory or a map that is yet to be drawn.
